Washington, DC—Formtek Inc., a leading provider of Enterprise Content Management (ECM) software and implementation services, announced today the release of an enhanced version of the Formtek | Orion Desktop Documents product. Desktop Documents gives organizations the ability to store and archive documents generated from Microsoft Office applications including email—using Formtek's secure and scalable ECM solution.

This release includes a new out-of-the-box full featured office document class to further standardize Formtek | Orion content metadata with the typical properties of Microsoft Office-generated documents and email. Administrators also have the ability to tailor the product to their organization's unique office document management requirements. This release also includes enhanced search functions that allow users to refine search criteria and set preferences for presentation of search results. This release also includes upgraded packaging to simplify installation and maintenance.

“Companies need a way to securely store their valuable day-to-day business information generated through their desktop and laptop PC applications. Formtek | Orion Desktop Documents gives users a way to capture the content for secure storage that is generated by desktop applications,” said Dick Weisinger, Formtek's Chief Technologist. “Formtek helps customers manage these documents and other content, such as technical drawings and data, through a transparent interface to the Formtek Enterprise Content Manager.”

Formtek | Orion Desktop Documents integrates Microsoft Applications with the Formtek | Orion Enterprise Content Manager. End users utilize Formtek | Orion software directly from Office applications and can navigate using the Windows® based Explorer.
